Diver Hunts Ocean Bed for Instrument Used To Kill Welfare Worker

By The Associated Press
LA JOLLA, Calif., Sept. 3.—A deep-sea diver descended into the waters of Lovera Cove yesterday to search the ocean bottom for the weapon which an apparently just maddened assailant used to bludgeon to death Mrs. Ruth M. Peterson, welfare worker at Pomona college, who was shot in the back of the head at a public meeting in the city.

Police released a score of persons whom they rounded up for questioning but picked up two more whose names were not disclosed.

A scientific hunt for clues began at Pomona college where hairs and other physical evidence found on the victim's hands were examined for possible steps in the identity of the attacker.

A fluorescence test developed by

Pomona college was applied to the torn underclothing of the victim. Edward A. Diekmann of the San Diego police in the squad and J. D. Laidmiller, research assistant in chemistry at Pomona college, who are using the test, declined to say what if any clue they had learned.

Your Health

Mastoiditis. Recently I read an encouraging report covering the advances made in the treatment of mastoiditis in children. Particular attention was called to the perfection of X-ray technique in taking pictures of the mastoid bone.

Many of our readers can recall the days when mastoiditis was a dreaded disease of childhood. In the old days children afflicted were often unnecessarily subjected to an operation. In an equal number of cases, operation was delayed too long. But young sufferers from this disease are very much better off than they used to be.

Recovery is Rapid. When the disease is recognized early and if necessary, operation is performed, the patient makes a rapid recovery. Let me warn you against delay in obtaining medical care.

It is a good plan for every one to be familiar with the early signs of this disease. In this connection, let me assure all worried mothers that earache or pain in the region of the ear is not necessarily a sign of mastoiditis. But in case of doubt, the X-ray will prove or disprove the diagnosis.

Mastoiditis, as its name indicates, is an infection of the mastoid bone or the mastoid cells. This infection is usually traced to neglect of a simple head cold, nasal sinusitis or tonsillitis. The germs travel from the nose to throat, through the tube from nose to ear, to the mastoid bone which is the bony prominence felt behind the ear.

Common Symptoms. The interior of this bone is made up of numerous air spaces, called mastoid cells. They communicate with one another and are connected with the middle ear. The latter in its turn, as I have suggested, communicates with the nose through the Eustachian tube.

It is of interest to learn that the mastoid cells are lined with the same type of membrane which lines that tube. This explains how easily germs may reach this mastoid. Once they reach this honey-combed bone, they become bottled up, multiply and form an abscess. When this occurs the victim complains of pain behind the ear, usually present. The pain subsides. Headache, nausea and fever are as pus begins to discharge from the affected ear. The pain reappears if the discharge stops before the infection is cleared.

In some cases the fever may be very high, but in other cases it is absent. If the child is fretful, feverish and complains of pain in the ear, consult with your doctor. If operation is advised, do not delay.

Answers to Health Queries. Mrs. M. S. Q.—I am very nervous, dizzy, easily excited and my feet feel like bricks. What would cause these symptoms? Would diseased tonsils be apt to cause such symptoms?

A.—Have a complete medical examination. Overcome any underlying infection. Make every effort to improve your general health and resistance. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

O. M. Q.—What do you advise for a red and shiny nose? My hands, too, are always red and cold.

A.—For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Married Comrades

BY ADELE GARRISON

Women Plan to Witness Arrival of "Chief" Anyway.

LILLIAN did not give either Harry or Dicky a chance to protest as she said we were getting the "hums" in being sent up stairs before the arrival of my father's twin brother. Both her husband and mine said something in humorously apologetic tones, but Lillian was taking so valiantly—purposely I knew—as she grabbed me by the arm and rushed me to the door of the library, that I could hear nothing of what they said. But that Katie heard them was patent from the giggles which marked her progress across the room in our wake.

"Oh-h!" she gurgled as the door closed behind her. She evidently had lingered to get the full flavor of the retort Harry Underwood was making. "dot Meester Underwood und dot Meester Graham, dey footest men in world I know."

"They probably are, Katie," Lillian drawled, "but I have been more convinced of that fact upon other occasions than I am tonight."

"You hear vor dey said strong now?" Katie queried hopefully.

"No," Lillian answered laconically. "You want me tell you?" she queried tentatively.

"Some other time," Lillian answered, to the disappointment of several. "I really am not equal to the alleged humor of our huge lords this evening."

We were climbing the stairs as she spoke, and I saw with amazement that she had what school girls would call a "distant peer" as being excluded from the kitchen upon the impending arrival of my father's twin brother. She had "trapped out of it" in her own because she was a woman. I knew her well enough to be sure that she would be very resourceful and very much ashamed of herself later on for she prides herself upon being a "good soldier" in every situation confronting her, but just now there was nothing to be done save to humor her—by ignoring her and letting her do and say what she would until her color vanished.

She turned as she reached the top of the stairs and put her finger to her lips, which held a twisted, gamine grin.

"If you want a front seat at this party, I know where there is one," she said.

Balcony Suggested

Katie giggled again, nervously this time, and I knew that she was as surprised and puzzled as I was at Lillian's word. But I resolved to play up to my old friend.

"I'll wager I know what you mean," I whispered with one eye upon my mother-in-law's door. "You mean the little side balcony that overlooks the kitchen door."

"Exactly," she whispered back as gleefully as might a child. "If we crouch down behind that balcony before midnight, we shall see the whole proceeding without being seen. I wouldn't miss it for two farms. And besides—"

She broke off, but I guessed what was in her mind. From that vantage point we would know at once if anything happened to endanger our men, instead of having to wait until the news was brought to us.

O.S.U. DEAN OF MEDICINE URGES DOCTORS' SUBSIDY

Favors Pledging of Minimum Income to Rural Physicians To Assure Against "Medical Famine."

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 3.—Dr. J. H. J. Upham, president of the American Medical Association, envisioned last night a new figure—the subsidized rural physician.

Here for the Utah State Medical association convention, Dr. Upham suggested the rural community of the near future may have itself against "medical famine" by group assurance of a professional livelihood to a physician or group of physicians.

Ohio State university's dean of medicine drew a sharp distinction, however, between such a subsidy and so-called "specialized medicine."

"There are not too many new physicians, although 5,000 medical students a year are graduated," he declared. "It's the old question of distribution."

"The automobile has contributed to irregular placement of doctors to their centralization in cities. Patients have a habit of driving to cities for treatment in summer and of sending trips to their local doctor in the season of bad roads. This factor for the seasonal complaint of 'inadequate medical service'."

Rural residents may correct this situation, Dr. Upham said, by banding together to pledge to a physician a minimum income sufficient to induce him to establish himself among them.

"This proposal is not related to 'specialized medicine,' he emphasized. "I feel that socialization of the profession would cause deterioration by camouflaging scientific progress by restraining individual contacts and by lowering standards of the medical schools."

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

By Marian Sims
"But" he said, "I'm not coming back from there and they say we ought to know—something—by morning."
"Will you call me then—either here or at the office? I don't want to be here," Harry was trying hard to get away from Carol for every thing.
For nothing, she pressed Goodnight Harry.
Blake said anxiously as she turned again to his shoulder, "You don't have to come tomorrow if you don't feel like it."
Of course I feel like it, "there's nothing I can do to stress he gets worse."
He went. Nothing so tragic could happen Blake felt in a world as golden as this one. Now come on and sit down a minute then I'll go and leave you in peace.
She said with deadly seriousness, "I don't believe I'd ever be entirely at peace while you were away."
His face glowed. His darling! That's the loveliest thing you could possibly say.
They went back out the next hour to the early months of their acquaintance, recalling foolish and joyous things that had slipped taken on a tremendous significance.
At ten o'clock he stood up reluctantly. "I said an hour ago that I'd go home. You'll—go straight to bed?"
Yes. His concern was like a fleecy blanket around her.
He said eagerly, "Can I stop for you in the morning?"
One of them she thought must cling to common sense. Darling, would better not. It will be hard enough to hide it in the office without inviting suspicion.
I guess you're right. He grinned the endearing "small boy grin" as he said, "I'll snarl at you before the whole force if you ask it."
She laughed. You needn't go that far. For a lamb like you that would be equally suspicious. He kissed her hungrily and finally let her go. Goodnight. Oh dear God I love you so.
He turned and left quickly, for fear he should be unable to let it all at all.

Her first waking thought was Blake. But little Harry was better. He had to be. She lay for a moment with her face hidden, testing the sweetness of last night's remembering how Blake had looked and felt.
The phone rang and she ran to answer it. Harry's voice said, "Carol and I plunged into his message. Has better his pulse and his temperature are down. The doctor says he ought to pull through."
She swallowed hard. Oh Harry I'm so glad. I knew he would. Her voice was shaking as she added quickly, "I'll stop by the hospital this afternoon to tell Marge. She hung up the receiver and went to get breakfast.
Five minutes later the phone rang again and her heart plunged. Surely little Harry couldn't have—not in five minutes.
She said "Yes" in a small frightened voice and then grew limp with relief Blake's voice asking, "Did you sleep well my darling?"
Oh. She sat down weakly. Good morning. Yes I did—better than ever in my life. I think and so?
I hated to sleep because then I couldn't remember—not consciously.
But my dear you must. After all there are a lot of days. I suppose there are. Well—I won't keep you now. I'll see you in an hour.
Yes Goodbye.
She wondered uneasily entering the office how well they could hide the miracle that had happened to them. I know it's written all over me she thought. I hope he doesn't have to see me about anything.
To her great relief he did not speak to her during the day. But as she walked towards the car line an automobile drew up to the curb and a voice said laughingly, "Could I give you a lift lady?"
Happiness surged over her in a warm flood. She frowned. I don't usually encourage pickups but just this once and slipped to beside him.
He laughed low in his throat. How'd I do today?
Beautifully. I felt as if I'd never even been introduced to you.
At the Sherwood she said firmly. It's my turn to cook dinner so you needn't argue it.
He grinned. I would dare. But can't I bring over that steak you were bragging about?
Yes you can do that.
He said "You darling" and then shook himself. Get out before I forget where we are.
She got out hugging, for her heart the thought of one more evening stretched from the clutching hands of Olympus.
But they knew very certainly that they could not be too much together. The Sherwood was as different and impersonal as any city apartment house but their friends' right hand men out.
When Porter Murray or any other acquaintance supposed an engagement the scene of prompt engagement. Blake for all the humor in his eyes said she was right. On those evenings he made it a point to drop in on his friends or to take a badge game at his club.
The author continued and Let me have your hat and go.

He put them away while he called Marge's number knowing as he did that where they were. Poor fool that Irma was brought to have trampled under foot such a capacity for tenderness and care.
Harry she said eagerly. It was back upon her now all the rush and dread and waiting. "Yes That Carol?" Harry's voice sounded as if he had run all day.
Yes. Is there—any news?
No. Just about the same.

END OF NRA MARKS START OF RECOVERY

ed in 1935 the figure was 151 million dollars. In the first half of 1936 the figure is 70 billion dollars. Thus there has been an increase of 57 billion dollars since 1932. Of this amount 8 billions came during the 23 months while NRA was in force and 9 billions of increase in the 14 months after NRA was voted.
National income statistics are reported by the government only on an annual basis. NRA was in force during a portion of 1933 all of the year 1934 and nearly 6 months of 1935. For the full year 1934 with NRA operating the national income amounted to 1 billion 400 million more than in the year 1933. But the government expenditures in 1934 were 4 billion larger than in 1933. Thus in the full year 1934 with Mr. Roosevelt's recovery program going full steam the national income did not increase by so much as the amount of the increase in government expenditures.
Building construction contracts awarded in the United States during the first six months of 1935 amounted to 667 million dollars in the first half of 1935, to 697 million dollars in the first half of 1936. There has been an increase of 30 million dollars since the first six months of 1935. Of this increase 30 millions came during the period while Mr. Roosevelt was inaugurating the revival through NRA. Five hundred and forty million of the increase has come since Mr. Roosevelt came to manage the revival.
The evidence is incontrovertible.

THERE is usually a definite reason for such complaints, so now let's reason sensibly. Don't try to get well in a day. This is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just can't be hurried. Therefore, if you are pale, tired, lack a keen appetite, have lost weight and feel run-down, a frequent sign that your blood cells are weak with a tendency toward anemia—then do try in the simple easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of SSS Blood Tonic to feel like yourself again.

Chesterfield Wins

...for uniformity

Why does every Chesterfield have the same taste... the same pleasing flavor and mildness. Because we draw on not just one year's tobacco crop but crops of several different years to make sure that Chesterfield's quality never varies. Every Chesterfield tastes just like every other Chesterfield—mild, not strong; always with a pleasing taste and aroma.

Chesterfields win because they're always the same...

CITY SCHOOLS TO SHARE IN STATE TAX DIVISION

Distribution of $11,645,717 for All Ohio Approved, $49,000 Expected by Hudson

Marion city schools will share in the more than $11 million in state tax money approved yesterday by the state board of control for distribution to the state public schools under the school foundation law.

Sup. C. A. Hudson said that the total of $11,645,717 appears to be a one hundred per cent quarterly settlement and that if it is the Marion schools will receive approximately $49,000.

The $49,000 anticipated from this settlement will increase to $95,000 in cash received by the city schools from the foundation program this year. The schools also have received $50,000 in notes from the state department to be taken up when funds from the various tax sources become available. The next settlement will be made in November and is expected to complete the $100,000 the schools anticipate receiving from the state for the year 1936.

The distribution represents funds for the third quarter of the present year included all schools of the state except the six schools in Glendon rural school district in Putnam county. The Associated Press reported.

The period covered in the distribution is from July and August.

If the quarterly distribution is for the full 100 per cent settlement it will be the first Marion has received since the foundation program became law. Mr. Hudson said in June the distribution amounted to 66 per cent and the first was approximately 33 per cent.

The financial situation of the Marion public schools at the opening of the 1935-36 year is much better than a year ago the superintendent said.

Sup. D. T. Mills of the county schools could not be reached for an estimate of the amount the county system probably will receive.
